INSYS SPONSORS CANCER CAREGIVERS EDUCATION PROGRAM

-Company to Partner with Arizona Myeloma Network for June 3 Event-

PHOENIX – (May 25, 2017) – Insys Therapeutics, Inc. (“Insys” or “the Company”) today announced its sponsorship of the Arizona Myeloma Network’s (“AzMN”) Cancer Caregivers Education Program® (“CCEP”). The AzMN, a 2016 Top-Rated Nonprofit by Great Nonprofits, delivers free cancer education to myeloma patients as well as to all cancer caregivers and their families. The CCEP is a series of events designed and offered to the public free of charge by the AzMN to provide caregivers of cancer patients and the cancer patients’ teams with practical knowledge, skills and strategies necessary for effectively caring for their loved ones as well as themselves.

At the CCEP event, scheduled for June 3rd, Dr. Steven Wong, M.D., board certified medical oncologist and hematologist from the UCLA Division of Hematology/Oncology, will discuss breakthrough cancer pain (“BTCP”), a major issue for not only myeloma patients, but for all cancer patients. BTCP can negatively affect the quality of life for cancer patients and survivors. Cancer survivor, Judge (retired) Randall Morrison, will also share his own personal cancer pain journey.

“As a Company dedicated to developing and providing innovative care solutions for patients, Insys is proud to sponsor this CCEP event. Educating cancer patients and caregivers on the cancer pain journey and breakthrough cancer pain is an integral part of our mission. We extend our gratitude to AzMN for its efforts to raise awareness and the opportunity to partner with them on this important educational initiative,” said Saeed Motahari, President and CEO of Insys.

“For Myeloma Awareness Month this past March, Arizona Governor Doug Ducey issued a proclamation to promote awareness of this rare and often misdiagnosed cancer,” said Barbara Kavanagh, Founder of AzMN. “We host events like CCEP for this very purpose and are especially grateful to Insys for their ongoing support over the years and for helping us to better educate cancer patients on the cancer pain journey,” she continued. “Insys truly takes their role in community engagement for the benefit of cancer patients and their families seriously.”

With June 4th recognized as National Cancer Survivors Day by the American Cancer Society, the CCEP plans to include other topics relevant to cancer patient caregivers, cancer patients and survivors alike. The CCEP is free to the public and provides a continental breakfast with leading cancer specialists and resources. More information about the event is below.
